A natural trial strategist, Cassie has the instincts, quick wit, and vision to effectively manage the litigation process with poise and tenacity.

Clients appreciate Cassie's balanced and empathetic counsel, and her ability to pick up on subtleties many would overlook. A true advocate at her core, Cassie is unflappable and unafraid of confrontation for the purpose resolving important issues for her clients. Among her greatest asset as a trial lawyer is her honed ability to thoughtfully distill a world of facts and laws into an approachable and compelling courtroom narrative – never losing the forest for the trees and keeping the interest of judges and juries top of mind.

Cassie works with clients of varying sizes, from large company general counsel to small business owners across numerous industries. Cassie prioritizes client communication and has an ability to meet stakeholders where they are in the dispute resolution process, clearly communicating business context, legal options, and avenues for success, while maintaining a clear focus on their goals and what is best for the situation at hand. Her favorite cases are those with great teams and with clients with whom she can build trust. She has litigated products liability, contract, franchisor-franchisee, oil and gas, and property cases. In addition to trying cases, Cassie also represents clients in arbitrations, mediations, and other alternative dispute resolution platforms.

Cassie is passionate about causes that advance access to justice and helping move the needle in pursuit of government systems that work for all. Cassie holds to these core values in her work and community involvement, including in her commitment to pro bono trial work. She is also involved with the Houston Young Lawyers Association, the Houston Association of Women Attorneys, and Beck Redden's Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion committee. In law school, Cassie was a successful mock trial competitor, winning awards for advocacy at local and national competitions. She learned the importance of understanding issues from both a factual and legal standpoint and how to present a compelling story. She now transfers those lessons to the next generation as a mock trial coach.

Before joining Beck Redden, Cassie graduated from the University of Houston Law Center with high honors. She was a member of the Houston Law Review, the Order of the Barristers, and the Order of the Barons. She also served as both a student representative and presenter on the Honor Board where she adjudicated real disputes on behalf of her peers before a panel of faculty and administrators. Her Honor Board experience gave her early exposure to the importance of understanding a client's stakes as her own to build the most compelling case possible.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- As second chair, obtained favorable jury verdict for claims under the federal Copyright Act. The case was based on the defendants' copyright infringement of the client's 18 different unique photography works. Cassie argued pretrial motions, picked the jury, directed the plaintiff-photographer, cross-examined the opposing side's witness, and gave the closing argument.
- Helped secure favorable resolution midtrial of $440 million dispute involving the purchase and sale of the Houston Astros baseball club and regional sports network. The case had been in litigation for more than a decade before Cassie joined the trial team to get the case before a jury, where resolution was reached partway through trial. Cassie deposed witnesses, briefed
