Leslie takes a personal approach with every client, ensuring their goals for each case are her top priority. A journalism background and an easygoing approach to problem solving help her present clients' issues in a clear and thoughtful manner.

Leslie is a native East Texan who clerked for Chief Judge Rodney Gilstrap of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Texas, one of the busiest courts in the nation, regarded for its efficiency and reverence for trial by jury. Leslie applies the skills she learned in a fast-paced clerkship to her practice and works out any issue she faces methodically and logically. Leslie served as Judge Gilstrap's first law clerk and gained unique insight into the Court's local practices and procedures that were implemented during her time in Marshall. Her practice includes representation of both plaintiffs and defendants in a wide-array of high-stakes civil litigation matters, including complex business disputes, oil and gas, personal injury, mass torts, patent litigation and trade-secret cases.

Leslie's passion for travel led her and her family to London, England for three years. Having joined the firm in 2012, she recently returned to Houston and plays a valuable role on the litigation team.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- Represented the project management company in a dispute involving construction of a multi-million dollar museum expansion project. After Leslie successfully briefed and argued a Rule 91a motion to dismiss, the case resulted in a favorable settlement.
- Represented SandBox in an intellectual property dispute, helping to secure a $49.2 million dollar judgment and unanimous jury finding. Her role included extensive development and management of discovery, briefing, witness preparation, and key assistance throughout the trial.
- Represented a Fortune 100 company in multiple lawsuits across the country involving medical device product liability claims, including extensive briefing, witness preparation, assisting with direct and cross examination of expert witnesses, drafting closing arguments and providing key assistance at multiple trials across the country.
- Represented an offshore oil and gas drilling and exploration company in numerous lawsuits, including as a plaintiff and defendant, involving breach of contract claims, several of which resolved with a favorable settlement. She was involved in all aspects of the cases, from discovery to motions practice.
- Represented a national real estate brokerage firm involving claims of fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of contract. Her involvement covered all aspects of the case including discovery, depositions and motions practice. After drafting a motion for partial summary judgment and receiving a favorable ruling on it, the case resulted in a favorable settlement.
- Represented a subsea oil and gas supplier and subsidiary of a Fortune 500 company in a patent infringement dispute in the Eastern District of Texas.
- Served on the trial team for a Fortune 500 medical device manufacturer,
