A trial lawyer with a background in economics, Madison is a systematic problem solver who recognizes the significance of advocating with clarity and concision.

With each new case presenting a unique set of challenges, Madison is skilled in analyzing complex legal puzzles through meticulous work and precision. Her practice encompasses a breadth of matters, serving clients of all sizes, from individuals to multinational corporations. From favorable settlements to trial verdicts, Madison has successfully represented both plaintiffs and defendants in complex commercial disputes, securities class action litigation, fiduciary matters, and property disputes, among others. She has experience in representing technology companies, utility providers, manufacturers, and has a growing portfolio of clients in the energy sector. Madison's expertise in oil and gas extends to energy contract disputes, royalty litigation, crude trading matters, and misrepresentations related to sale and purchase agreements.

Madison prioritizes understanding her clients' goals and what is best for her client in the dispute resolution process. Madison has played a key role in trials, including the presentation of opening statement and closing argument as well as questioning key witnesses. She firmly believes that effective representation hinges on thorough preparation, earning the trust of her clients to maintain composure and organization. Her ability to remain reliable under pressure garners respect in the courtroom and fosters strong relationships with clients through clear communication of important issues. Madison's mastery and forward-thinking approach stem from her elite, trial-focused legal training.

Beyond her legal practice, Madison is committed to community service and leadership. She is a member of the Institute for Energy Law's 7th Leadership Class, serves as an Ambassador for Houston Haven, a volunteer with Agape Development, and contributes as a member of the UT Law Young Alumni Committee. Prior to joining Beck Redden, Madison clerked for the Honorable Ed Kinkeade of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas. During law school, she gained valuable appellate experience as an intern for Texas Supreme Court Justice Jimmy Blacklock.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- In 2024, along with partner Fields Alexander and associate Jake McClellan, prevailed in a two-week breach of contract jury trial. Beck Redden's client entered into a three-year contract, which the defendant terminated several months into the relationship. Beck Redden brought suit alleging that the termination had been wrongful, and seeking the recovery of the profits its client would have earned over the life of the contract. The jury sided with Beck Redden on all issues, awarding over $15,000,000 in lost profits. With interest and attorneys' fees, the judgment in favor of Beck Redden's client exceeds $26,000,000.
- Represented a nationwide company in a breach of contract case, handled pre-trial preparations, argued pre-trial motion, and performed witness examination for the client.
- Represented a private equity company in a products liability case and obtained summary judgment on affirmative defenses disposing of all claims against the client.
